

Abstract

- Deep learning is an AI function that mimics the workings of the human brain in processing data for use in detecting objects, recognizing speech, translating languages, and making decisions.
- Deep learning AI is able to learn without human supervision, drawing from data that is both unstructured and unlabeled.
- Deep learning, a form of machine learning, can be used to help detect fraud or money laundering, among other functions.